Over-Work Weakens Your Kidneys.

Unhealthy Kidneys Make Impure Blood.

All the blood in your body passes through your kidneys once every three minutes.

The kidneys are your blood purifiers, they filter out the waste or impurities in the blood.

If they are sick or out of order, they fail to do their work.

Pains, aches and rheumatism come from excess of uric acid in the blood, due to neglected kidney trouble.

Kidney trouble causes quick or unsteady heart beats, and makes one feel as though they had heart trouble, because the heart is over-working in pumping thick, kidney-poisoned blood through veins and arteries.

It is to be considered that only urinary troubles were to be traced to the kidneys, but now modern science proves that nearly all constitutional diseases have their beginning in kidney trouble.

If you are sick you can make no mistake by first doctoring your kidneys.

The midday extraordinary effect of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases and is sold on its merits by all druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes.

You may have a sample bottle by mail. Name of Swamp-Root, free also pamphlet telling you how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble.

Mention this paper when writing Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y.

Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp Root, and the address Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

Observations of Passing Events.

THERE are few men in North Carolina, after due deliberation, who will dare say that the Southern Cotton Association has not done great good in this State and throughout the South.

The Cotton Association. It is hard to get the farmers themselves to take interest enough in the Association to give it decent support.

If the farmers could be induced to be thoroughly loyal to the Association, others would take more interest and it would not be so hard to keep up the work.

The truth is, the whole land is dependent upon cotton, but so few people realize it. When the price of cotton is good other things do well, but when the price of cotton is low other things feel it and suffer.

Every branch of trade is either directly or indirectly dependent on cotton. When the people wake up to this it will not be so hard to maintain the Southern Cotton Association.

COLLIER'S WEEKLY thinks well of Governor Glenn's attitude towards the negro and under the above heading has the following to say of him:

Good For Glenn. "The Governor of North Carolina is among those who have recently struck the right tone in handling the negro question.

Congratulations. He declares that black and white alike shall be punished when they do wrong, encouraged when they do well.

Colored people, he says, should be helped to make the best of themselves. Cooperation will do most.

The Sheriff in Booker Washington's community telephones to him when a crime is charged or suspected against a negro, and the guilty man is found and turned over to the officials.

Several of the Governors are doing well—the Governor of Alabama among the number. And it is to be remembered, by those who too easily despair, that two-thirds of the lynchings of negroes have no relation to assault, and that in twelve months, about two years ago, there were more actual or attempted criminal assaults in Chicago than there were by all the negroes in the United States.

The negro problems are hard enough. It is better not to see them as more hopeless than they are."

The short story of High Point's development told in a clipping elsewhere from the Charlotte News, is a most striking one. It should be a lesson to every town in North Carolina.

The Story of High Point. When one begins to wonder why one town makes more development and more rapid strides than other towns of similar situation, it will be easy to locate the cause if investigation is made in the proper direction.

Generally it is not because the remarkably successful town has superior advantages over the other towns; it is not because the successful town has so much more money than other towns; but it is simply because it has more energy and will to do things than the other towns.

Unanimity of purpose amongst the citizens of any community may lead to great things, and will lead to great things if properly directed. There is nothing to be made by reading the remarkable accounts of what other towns and communities have done and wondering how they have done it.

The reasonable and sensible thing for every town to do, is to put energy and brains and money and muscle together and go at something. Being busy about our own affairs will do us much more good than guessing or surmising about the affairs of others.

High Point has succeeded because it has been sending something away all the time that brings money back to the town. The town or community that would have similar success must make things and sell them like High Point has done.

THERE is a story current that a fairly prosperous farmer became dissatisfied with his home and talking it over with his wife, they decided to sell the farm and buy a better one—one more to their liking. So they employed a dealer in real estate to advertise their home and sell it for them.

Some time afterward the good farmer casually picked up a newspaper and found an advertisement of an almost model home. The farm was described, with its good and handsome dwelling, fine fields, good pastures, excellent water, plenty of good fruit, etc. He was very much pleased with the home as it was described in the advertisement, and calling to his good wife he said: "Here is an advertisement of the very home we want."

He communicated with the real estate dealer and to his great surprise he found that the beautiful and desirable property advertised was his own home with which he had become so dissatisfied. And so it is with Eastern Carolina. Many of our people think and say that they are not satisfied with this great and wonderfully blessed section of North Carolina, when the truth is, there is no other part of the State comparable to it.

A gentleman of fine intelligence and careful observation of this and other parts of this and other States, said to us a few days ago that Eastern Carolina has wonderful resources. "But," said he, "the people are just simply asleep and do not make effort to utilize their advantages." And we believe it is true. People talk about the "garden spot," but this gentleman is of the opinion that Halifax county lies well in the belt of "garden spots," and believes that the people only need wake up and exert themselves in a manner commensurate with their opportunities and the resources of this section and fortune will smile on them with rich plenteousness that will bring independence to all. If these things be true, and they are, why cannot our people all through Eastern Carolina realize it, seize the opportunity and make the most of it?

GIANT PUZZLES THEM.

Capital Physicians Study Patient 7 Feet 8 Inches Tall.

(Special to Baltimore Sun.)

Washington, D. C.—Unusual interest has been aroused among medical and surgical men of Washington in the case of John Turner, a giant, of 25 N. street southeast, who has just been ordered discharged from the public ward of Providence Hospital. This is his last night at the institution.

Although Turner was undoubtedly the tallest man in Washington and ranked with the giants of the land he spent over four months in the public ward of the hospital without the public obtaining the slightest inkling that he was undergoing treatment.

By reason of Turner's reclusive sort of life, few persons, even in his own neighborhood, seem to have ever known of his existence.

Turner is a native of Prince George's county, Maryland, and his true height, as calculated by physicians at the hospital, is 7 feet 8 inches. His head bumps against the wall of the ordinary dwelling ceiling, and he had to stoop to pass through many of the hospital doors. Turner is only 30 years old, and the physicians do not know whether he has finished growing.

An interesting discussion has arisen among the fraternity as to whether Turner's case is one of true gigantism or one of abnormal enlargement of the bones. Some physicians say it is a case of true gigantism. Others declare just as firmly that it is not gigantism, but acromegaly. The former group is headed by Dr. Charles C. Marbury, of 1121 Fourteenth street northwest, who was in charge of the patient. The other group is headed by Dr. D. Percy Hickling, of 1403 Rhode Island avenue.

Included in the latter group is Dr. William S. Thayer, of 406 Cathedral street, Baltimore, an associate professor of Johns Hopkins University. Dr. Thayer is understood to believe the case to be one of "acromegaly." This case was brought to his attention by Dr. Marbury, and he became deeply interested.

The case, in spite of the fact that nothing has been made public about his existence, is well known to the leading medical and surgical men of Washington, and will be the subject of both monograph and discussion before the local medical society during its weekly sessions. Splendid X-ray photographs of the bones in Turner's body were taken while he was at Providence Hospital. Similar pictures, in addition to a number of other photographs of varying kinds, were taken by the War Department's surgeons in the Army Medical Museum, to which institution Turner was taken for observation and scientific purposes.

Many physicians contend that there is no reason why a giant should not be just as healthy and normal as a man of normal height. They contend, too, that there is no reason why a dwarf should be necessarily abnormal in its bodily functions. Others are inclined to believe that gigantism has a baneful effect upon certain bodily organs and that it weakens them. Most of the neurologists believe Turner's case to be one of plain acromegaly; that is, an abnormal growth of the bones after the man has attained the age of an adult. Sometimes the bones become larger from end to end, but in most cases that have been studied the enlargement generally occurs near the joints.

A Lost Chord.

(By Adelaide Anna Proctor.)

I was weary and ill at ease, And my fingers wondered idly Over the noisy keys.

I do not know what I was playing, Or what I was dreaming then, But I struck one chord of music, Like the sound of a great Amen.

It flooded the crimson twilight, Like the close of Angel's Psalm, And it laid on my fevered spirit With a touch of infinite calm.

It quieted pain and sorrow, Like love overcoming strife; It seemed the harmonious echo From every discordant life.

It linked all preplexed meanings Into one perfect peace, And trembled away into silence As if it were loth to cease.

I have sought, but I seek it vainly, That one lost chord divine, Which came from the soul of the organ, And entered into mine.

It may be that Death's bright angel Will speak in that chord again, It may be that only in Heaven I shall hear that grand Amen.

Earth's Population.

(New York World.)

The question as to the number of human beings that ever lived on this globe, is, of course, unanswerable, authorities on this subject differ so widely. The Bible places the date of creation at about 4000 B. C. Latter-day geologists figure anywhere from 10,000 to 100,000 years, and John Fiske, one of the most eminent authorities, gives good reasons for supposing human beings to have existed for half a million years.

To-day we estimate the earth's population at 1,500,000,000—a very generous estimate. One-half of this population is female. Experience tables show that there are three generations in every century.

From these slender data it is but a simple mathematical calculation in progression toward the year in which the first pair of human beings appeared on earth. Upon this hypothesis the year 5000 B. C. brings us down to about three million people. If we accept and from this point retrace our steps to the present day—say 1900 A. D.—we arrived at the conclusion that a total of 72,000,000,000 human beings have been born to date, of which number only about 1,500,000,000 are alive to-day.

Had every individual body been preserved in a casket measuring on an average 6x2x2 feet, all could have been buried in Oklahoma's area of 38,700 square miles, and a liberal allowance of space for paths and driveways been left. Or all the coffins could have been dropped into Lake Superior without endangering the inhabitants of its shores on account of a possible tidal wave. The present living population of 1,500,000,000 persons can find standing room on Staten Island, in New York harbor.

In the State of Texas you could place each man, woman and child seventy feet apart, giving each 4,900 square feet of land—room sufficient for house, cattle and vegetable garden.

Within the limits of these United States each living human being to-day could have 65,000 square feet, or they could be placed 225 lineal feet apart.

The next time you hear anybody talking "overpopulation" you can shut him up by telling him that you can pack the whole lot—1,500,000,000 people—in a box measuring 2,000 feet each way.

NORTH CAROLINA'S SECESSION ORDINANCE.

Prepared by Judah P. Benjamin.

(Raleigh Times, 6th.)

"Let me tell you a little story," said Col. John Nichols to a Times man this morning. "The story," said he, "may not interest many of your readers, because few of them were living here when the occurrences of which I speak took place. Some of the older citizens of the state will remember the facts.

"On May 20, 1861, the convention called for the purpose passed the ordinance of secession, and North Carolina took her place with her sister states in the Southern Confederacy. Hon. George E. Badger, who was one of the delegates from Wake county, offered a series of resolutions looking to the separation of the state from the Union. Hon. Burton Craige, a delegate from Rowan county, and who was credited with being Governor Ellis' personal representative in the convention, offered a substitute for Mr. Badger's resolution which was adopted.

"There was much speculation as to the author of Mr. Craige's resolution or ordinance of secession. The history of this instrument was known to a few, but I have never seen any publication of the facts and circumstances of its preparation. My information came to me in a confidential manner at the time, and from a source that I believe was strictly reliable.

"A few days before the convening of the state convention, May 20, 1861, Governor Ellis sent a trusted young man from Raleigh to Montgomery, Alabama—at that time the capital of the Confederacy—with a sealed package to President Jefferson Davis, with the strict injunction to deliver it in person to Mr. Davis, and await his reply. On Saturday before the convention met this young man, the confidential messenger of Governor Ellis, returned with a sealed package and delivered it to his Excellency. That package contained the ordinance of secession, prepared by Judah P. Benjamin, and which was adopted by the state convention.

"Now to the point. That young man was a gallant young North Carolinian, and had been a medical student, though I am inclined to the belief that he had not graduated, but did valuable hospital work during the war. At the close of hostilities he left the state, and has traveled much and been employed in various avocations. Misfortune overtook him and unable to longer battle with the world for a support in his enfeebled age, he wandered back to his native state, and is now an inmate of the Soldiers' Home. The eye that once sparkled so brightly has grown dim; the strong arm has been weakened, and the brisk, elastic step is now tottering and unsteady.

"Is not this a case where the Daughters of the Confederacy might bestow a little of their abundant sympathy and bountiful charity?" Then Colonel Nichols added: "This is a true story. There is no fiction about it."
